

2025 Annual Report

Date:
December 2025

A word from our Chairman

Since the inception of Reporters Shield in 2023, our principle aim remains to protect and defend investigative journalism and other public interest reporting from being silenced or crippled by legal threats and intimidation.

In recent years, the growth of strategic lawsuits against public participation, often referred to as SLAPPs, has created an environment in which litigation itself can become a weapon. Lawsuits costing millions of dollars in legal fees, prolonged court battles, and the looming threat of ruin can deter even the most determined newsroom from publishing stories of public importance.

Reporters Shield was launched to confront this reality head-on. We are a membership organisation that equips journalists and organisations with the legal support they need to continue fearless reporting. Through our mutual defence fund and in collaboration with media lawyers and freedom of expression advocates, members have access to specialist legal support, from prevention and pre-publication risk assessment, to robust responses to threats, and full defence in court when necessary.

The impact of our work is evident. Our membership has grown to include investigative newsrooms and public-interest organisations across continents. We have supported outlets in navigating complex legal threats, provided pre-publication risk assessments that help avert litigation before it begins, and strengthened the resilience of independent reporting in jurisdictions where legal intimidation is most acute.

As we look ahead, the mission of Reporters Shield remains urgent and undiminished. For every editor that thinks they will never get sued, you might not have been sued yet but, if you're publishing reporting that matters, you will be. With a global community of members, we are building a model of solidarity that ensures no newsroom faces these challenges alone.

Our Impact in Action

01.

Climate Home News

“We've learned from the top-quality legal advice we have received.”

Our programme reduces the legal risks Climate Home News incur from their reporting of businesses who fail to meet their green commitments.

- Pre-publication legal risk assessments

02.

Press One

“He didn't pursue charges, so the intervention had the desired effect”

Press One was threatened with formal legal action by the subject of an investigation reporting sexual misconduct towards students. We coordinated a robust response letter that gave the editors the confidence to publish the story.

- Robust response letters to formal legal threats.

03.

Context

“Without their support, we would have been wiped out.”

Reporters Shield is providing Context with assistance in several cases, including a €3.4 million SLAPP by the business tycoon Jurgen Faff.

- Initial trial won
- Gag lawsuit thrown out

What makes Reporters Shield Unique

Mutual Defence Fund

Created by journalists for journalists. Each member contributes to a shared mutual defence pot designed to cover potentially ruinous legal fees

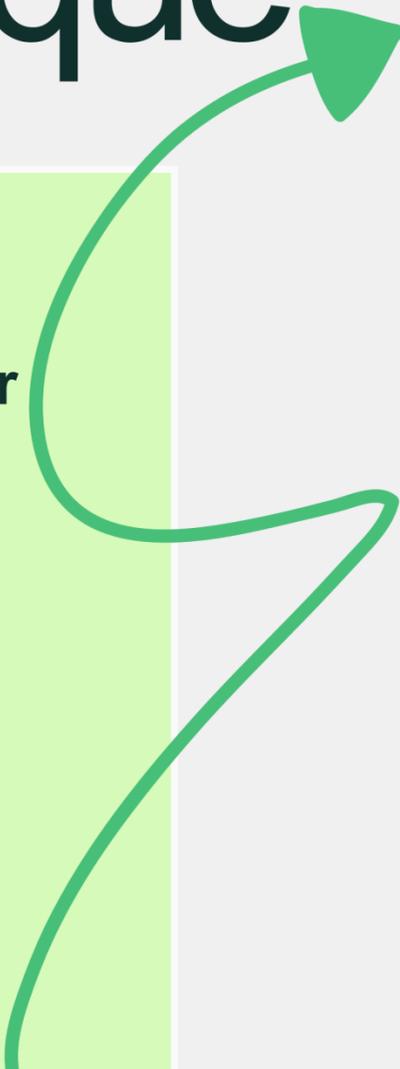

Inclusive Membership

Our membership is deliberately cross-sectoral so it can protect journalism that performs public-interest reporting even when produced outside traditional newsroom models

International Legal Cover

Liability tourism means defendants are increasingly sued in foreign jurisdictions. Paid-for legal defence from a global network of lawyers ensures specialist representation wherever it's needed.
